6. The use of a bridle in place of an uninterrupted rope pennant (as specified above) is permissible using the stated overall thickness and length. However, the only permissible Bridle configurations are shown below:

Examples 1,2and 3 illustrate a "Direct Method". A "Ball" method is the same, except the bridle (pennant) and light chain attach to the mooring buoy.

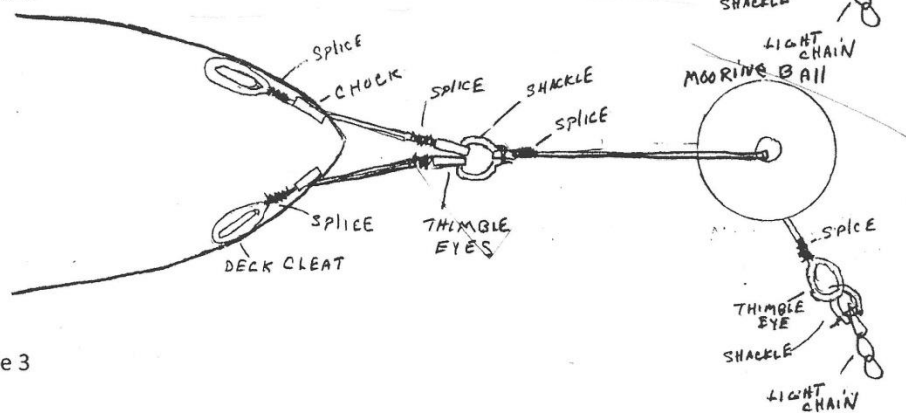

In Example 3; if a pick-up buoy is utilized, there should be a provision to connect both eyes of the bridle to the buoy.

Note that there no other connections of rope or chain are allowed other than described or shown.
